Ben Wallace got his start with horses when he began volunteering at a local barn to learn to calf rope. He quickly drifted away from roping and towards foundation training, working with green horses. Over time he began putting first rides on colts, working with problem horses, and helping the owners get started with their horse after training. In 2012 he started Arrowhead Horsemanship. He continues to start colts, work with problem horses, and give lessons. Whenever possible, he also travels to teach at Equine Expos and Clinics.